

Caglia Environmental featured in Waste Advantage Magazine

National Publication Spotlights Caglia Environmental's Recycling Services and Commitment to Community

Fresno – Caglia Environmental is featured in an article and on the cover of this month's Waste Advantage Magazine, a national publication serving the solid waste and recycling industry.

The article titled, In the Spotlight: Caglia Environmental-Rooted in the Community, features interviews with key managers regarding landfill operations; how they are meeting the challenges of recycling since China's ban of U.S. recycling material imports; construction and demolition diversion; AB 1826 implementation for commercial customers; the company's safety culture; recruitment of the best people; and the Caglia family's decades of community involvement.

"As a family, we are pleased our solid waste companies have received national attention," said Rich Caglia, head of Corporate Development for Caglia Environmental and the Caglia family's spokesman. "We have a great team of managers and staff who all work together to make Caglia Environmental a leader in the waste and recycling industry. We wouldn't be where we are without the hard work of a lot of great people."

The article also describes the individual solid waste and recycling companies owned by the Caglia family that makeup Caglia Environmental: Industrial Waste and Salvage (IWS), Cedar Avenue Recycling and Transfer Station (CARTS), both in Fresno County, and the Redrock Environmental Group in Madera County.

Click here to read the article in its entirety: <https://wasteadvantagemag.com/in-the-spotlight-caglia-environmental-rooted-in-the-community/>

Caglia Environmental is committed to preserving and protecting the environment by providing advanced solid waste and recycling services to communities in the Central Valley.

